Part B

(5 × 5 = 25)

Answer all the questions, choosing either (a) or (b).

11. (a) Read the comprehension and answer the questions given below.

She dressed plainly because she could not dress well, but she was unhappy as if she had really fallen from a higher station; since with women there is neither caste nor rank, for beauty, grace and charm take the place of family and birth.

Mathilde suffered ceaselessly, feeling herself born to enjoy all delicacies and all luxuries. She was distressed at the poverty of her dwelling, at the bareness of the walls, at the shabby chairs, the ugliness of the curtains. All those things, of which another woman of her rank would never even have been conscious, tortured her and made her angry. She thought of long reception halls hung with ancient silk, of the dainty cabinets containing priceless curiosities and of the little coquettish perfumed reception rooms made for chatting at five o'clock with intimate friends, with men famous and sought after, whom all women envy and whose attention they all desire.

When she sat down to dinner, before the round table covered with a tablecloth in use three days, opposite her husband, who uncovered the soup tureen and declared with a delighted air, "Ah, the good soup! I don't know anything better than that," she thought of dainty dinners, of shining silverware, of tapestry that peopled the walls with ancient personages and with strange birds flying in the midst of a fairy forest; and she thought of delicious dishes served on marvelous plates and of the whispered gallantries to which you listen with a sphinx-like smile while you are eating the pink meat of a trout or the wings of a quail.

She had no gowns, no jewels, nothing. And she loved nothing but that. She felt made for that. She would have liked so much to please, to be envied, to be charming, and to be sought after.

- (i) Why does Mathilde dress plainly?
 - (1) She does not like the fashion of the times.
 - (2) She refuses to conform to what society dictates about dressing well.
 - (3) She cannot afford to dress well.
- (ii) What is the attitude of Mathilde's husband about their financial situation?
 - (1) He is grateful for what they have.
 - (2) He resents the fact that they cannot have more.
 - (3) He envies those whose wives and residences have more elegance.
- (iii) What does Mathilde want most?
 - (1) To cook good food for her family, especially good soup for her husband.
 - (2) To enjoy the time she has to spend with her husband.
 - (3) To be envied, to be charming, to be sought after.

- (iv) According to the narrator, what often makes women of humble origins equal to women of the upper socio-economic classes?
- (1) A professional job for which she is well paid.
 - (2) Natural ingenuity, instinct for what is elegant, and a supple mind.
 - (3) Good furniture and clothing, such as fine jewelry and Oriental tapestries.
- (v) Mathilde's attitude can best be described as
- (1) covetous
 - (2) scornful
 - (3) contemptuous

Or

- (b) What is attention grabber? How is it used in 'introducing yourself'?

12. (a) Make notes from the following passage.

Have you ever wondered where chocolate comes from? Well, chocolate is made from beans which grow in pods on the Theobroma cacao tree. These trees grow in several different countries and the flavour of the beans varies depending on where they come from. The beans also vary in flavour, depending on the age of the tree. After the beans have been collected and dried, they are transported to chocolate factories. There, the beans are weighed and separated by type so that the manufacturer knows exactly what kind of cacao is going into the chocolate. This ensures the flavour of the chocolate is consistent over time.

Next, the cacao beans are cracked, and then winnowed – that is, the broken shells are blown away, which leaves the crushed pieces of cacao beans, called ‘nibs’. The cacao nibs are then crushed and ground into a thick paste called chocolate liquor. This is bitter and not very smooth or creamy. To improve the flavour, the manufacturer mixes in things like sugar, vanilla and milk. You could eat this mixture, and it would taste pretty good, but it wouldn’t quite have the right texture. So the manufacturer runs the mixture through steel rollers and then it is ‘conched’. This is a process which involves putting the mixture in a machine that mixes and mashes the chocolate. Conching can last a few hours for cheaper chocolate, and up to six days for more expensive types. Finally, we have chocolate!

THE DOCTOR'S WORD by R K Narayan.

PEOPLE came to him when the patient was on his last legs. Dr. Raman often burst out, "Why couldn't you have come a day earlier?". The reason was obvious visiting fee twenty-five rupees, and more than that people liked to shirk the fact that the time had come to call in Dr. Raman; for them there was something ominous in the very association. As a result when the big man came on the scene it was always a quick decision one way or another. There was no scope or time for any kind of wavering or white washing.

Long years of practice of this kind had bred in the doctor a certain curt truthfulness; for that very reason his opinion was valued ; he was not a mere doctor expressing an opinion but a judge pronouncing a verdict. The patient's life hung on his words. This never unduly worried Dr. Raman. He never believed that agreeable words ever saved lives. He did not think it was any of his business to provide unnecessary dope when as a matter of course Nature would tell them the truth in a few hours. However, when he glimpsed the faintest sign of hope, he rolled up his sleeve and stepped into the arena: it might be hours or days, but he never withdrew till he wrested the prize from Tama's hands.

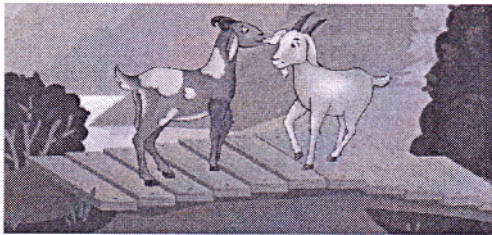

Today, standing over a bed, the doctor felt that he himself needed someone to tell him soothing lies. He mopped his brow with his kerchief and sat down in the chair beside the bed. On the bed lay his dearest friend in the world: Gopal. They had known each other for forty years now, starting with their Kinder-garten days. They could not, of course, meet as much as they wanted, each being wrapped in his own family and profession. Occasionally, on a Sunday, Gopal would walk into the consulting room, and wait patiently in a corner till the doctor was free. And then they would dine together, see a picture, and talk of each other's life and activities. It was a classic friendship standing over, untouched by changing times, circumstances, and activities.

Answer the following questions:

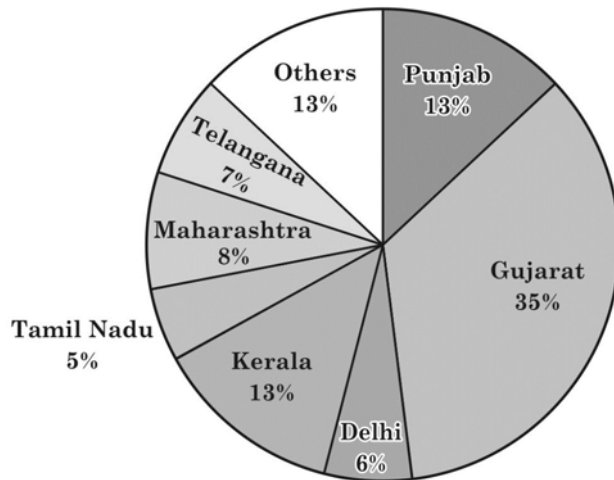

- (a) What words did the doctor usually burst out when patients came at the end? (1)
- (b) What was the reason for the patients came at the last moment? (2)

- (c) Why was doctor's opinion valued? (2)

THE ROMAN IMAGE by R.K. Narayan

The Talkative Man said :

Once I was an archaeologist's assistant. I wandered up and down the country probing, exploring, and digging, in search of antiquities, a most interesting occupation, although cynics sometimes called us "grave-diggers." I enjoyed the work immensely. I had a master who was a famous archaeologist called Doctor something or other.

He was a superb, timeless being, who lived a thousand years behind the times, and who wanted neither food nor roof nor riches if only he was allowed to gaze on undisturbed at an old coin or chip of a burial urn.

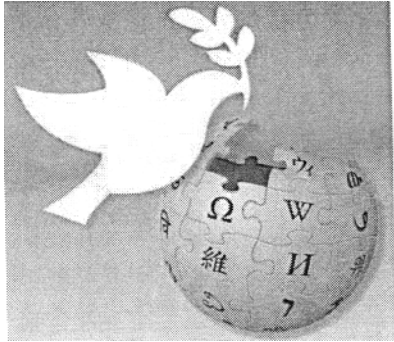

He had torn up the earth in almost all parts of India and had brought to light very valuable information concerning the history and outlook of people of remote centuries. His monographs on each of his excavations filled several shelves in all the important libraries. And then, as our good fortune would have it, he received an inspiration that Malgudi district was eminently diggable. I am not competent to explain how he got this idea, but there it was. Word was brought to me that the great man was staying in the dark bungalow and was in need of an assistant. Within an hour of hearing it I stood before the great man. He was sitting on the floor with the most crazy collection of articles in front of him pots and beads and useless coins and palm leaves, all of them rusty and decaying. He had a lens by his side, through which he looked at these articles and made notes.

He asked me: "What do you know of the archaeological factors of your district?" I blinked. Honestly I didn't know there was any archaeology in our place. He looked at me through his old spectacles, and I realized that my living depended upon my answer. I mustered up all the knowledge of elementary history I had acquired in my boyhood, and replied : "Well, nothing has so far been done in any methodical manner, although now and then we come across some ignorant villagers ploughing up old unusual bits of pottery and metal".

Answer the following questions:

- (a) What was the talkative man doing as an archaeologist's assistant? (1)
- (b) How was the passion of the famous archaeologist for his job described? (2)

- (c) When the talkative man met the archeologist, what was the archeologist doing? (2)

He remembered that he had a number of things he had to take care of he went off to the market for something to eat, he traded his book for one that was thicker and he found a bench in the plaza where he could sample the new wine that he had bought. The day was hot and the wine was refreshing. The sheep were at the gates of the city, in a stable that belonged to his friend. The boy knew a lot of people in the city. That was what made travelling appeal to him- he always made new friends, and he didn't need to spend all of his time with them. When someone sees the same people everyday, as had happened to him at the seminary, they wind up becoming a part of that person's life. And they want the person to change. If someone isn't what others want them to be, the others become angry. Everyone seems to have a clear idea of how other people should lead their lives, but none about his or her own

Biofertilisers are prepared from eco-friendly and sustainable biological sources that have an advantage over chemical fertilisers. There are several types of biofertilisers like Panchakavya, Vermiwash and vermicompost. Vermicomposting is a method of preparing biofertiliser that can be used for sustainable agriculture. Sustainable agriculture involves use of eco-friendly farming methods to keep the environment pollution free and maintain soil health. Vermicomposting involves use of earthworms to break down the biological waste generated in domestic households and leaf litter in fields and gardens. Any kind of biological waste can be composted using earth worms which are freely available in wet soils. Waste can be collected in bins on a daily basis and 25 to 50 earthworms are added and covered with a layer of soil. A small amount of sour curd may be diluted and added to increase the rate of decomposition. After the bin is fill it may be covered by a wet jute bag and set aside for 45 days to complete the decomposition. At regular intervals the waste must be turned over for uniform decomposition. At the end of 45 days rich compost with a pleasant smell is obtained which is ready for use.

12. Read the passage given below and write a brief summary in not more than 100 words

Human digestive system

The digestive system of humans consist of an alimentary canal and associated glands. Alimentary canal consists of the mouth, buccal cavity, pharynx, oesophagus, stomach and small intestine, large intestine, rectum and anus. Accessory digestive glands include the salivary glands, liver and pancreas. Inside the mouth, the teeth masticate the food, the tongue tastes the food and manipulates it for proper mastication by mixing with saliva.

Food made into a bolus and swallowed (deglutition). The teeth of man embedded in socket of jawbone and so thecodont, man has two sets of teeth and so diphyodont and different kinds of teeth so heterodont. Human dentition shows four types of teeth – incisors, canines, premolars and molars with a dental formula as $2123/2123$.

Saliva contains a starch digesting enzyme- salivary amylase or ptyalin that converts starch to maltose. Food in the mouth passes into pharynx and enters oesophagus in the form of bolus and moves into stomach by peristalsis. The mucosa of stomach has gastric glands which are made of three types of cells-mucus neck cells secrete mucus, peptic or chief cells secrete proenzyme pepsinogen and parietal or oxyntic cells secrete HCl for conversion of inactive pepsinogen to pepsin. The mucosal lining forms folds called rugae in stomach and villi in the intestine. Proteins are broken down by pepsin to proteoses and peptones. Renin found in the gastric juice of infants helps in the digestion of milk protein. In the stomach protein digestion takes place and a small amount of gastric lipase starts digestion of fats. The food in the form of chyme enters into the duodenum part of the small intestine and is acted upon by pancreatic juice, bile and finally by the enzymes in the succus entericus so that the digestion of carbohydrates, proteins and fats is completed.

13. Read the passage about process of extraction of crude enzyme amylase from germinating seeds and draw a flow chart.

Soak 50 g of green gram seeds overnight. 15. Read the given passage on Bacteria and answer the questions given.

Bacteria are primitive organisms that possess prokaryotic cell structure. These are among the earliest inhabitants of earth and based on the period of origin they may be grouped as Archaeobacteria and Eubacteria. Archaeobacteria are ancient bacteria that inhabit extreme habitats such as hot springs, salt pans, snow – covered areas and guts of ruminant animals. Eubacteria are later formed and include the Blue-green algae or Cyanobacteria. Prokaryotic cell structure is characterised by the absence of a well- defined nucleus and double membrane bound organdies like mitochondria, chloroplasts, endoplasmic reticulum and Golgi bodies. Hence the cytoplasm is divided into two regions-inner centropiasm containing the single DNA molecule and the outer chromoplasm with ribosomes and chromatophores. Finger-like outgrowths of the plasma membrane called mesosomes are involved in respiration

16. Paraphrase the abstract given below in about 100 words

Agriculture is the prime occupation of the rural population in India. It is the backbone of the Indian Economy and has been the food source for the expanding Indian population and is also a part of the nation's revenue in the form of exports. Food security of the nation was achieved in the last century due to the untiring efforts of scientists like Dr. M.S. Swaminathan who have directed their research on fast-growing and high yielding crop varieties. In the beginning agriculture was dependent on natural fertilisers and natural methods of pest and weed control. But the need to increase the food supply in the later years due population explosion, the use of chemical fertilisers and pesticides became rampant. With the passage of time the indiscriminate use of these chemicals in agricultural lands affected the soil quality and also the quality of the produce. Many of the chemicals had residual effects that brought about crippling diseases among children which was one of the many adverse effects caused by the use of chemicals for agriculture. The best example is that of the insecticide called Endosulfan that wreaked havoc in Kasaragod district of Kerala As a result attention was once again focused on biological fertilizers and pest repellants as a sustainable initiative to preserve and protect the environment. This led to the development of Biofertilisers for nitrogen in the form of nitrogen-fixing bacterial and Cyanobacterial inocula and phosphate solubilising VAM fungi.

In the 16th century, an age of great marine and terrestrial exploration, Ferdinand Magellan led the first expedition to sail around the world. As a young Portuguese noble, he served the king of Portugal, but he became involved in the quagmire of political intrigue at-court and lost the king's favor. After he was dismissed from service by the king of Portugal, he offered to serve the figure Emperor Charles V of Spain.

A papal decree of 1493 had assigned all land in the New World west of 50 degrees W longitude to Spain and all the land east of that line to Portugal. Magellan offered to prove that the East Indies fell under Spanish authority. On September 20, 1519, Magellan set sail from Spain with five ships. More than a year later, one of these ships was exploring the topography of South America in search of a water route across the continent. This ship sank, but the remaining four ships searched along the southern peninsula of South America. Finally they found the passage they sought near 50 degrees S latitude. Magellan named this passage the Strait of All Saints, but today it is known as the Strait of Magellan.

One ship deserted while in this passage and returned to Spain, so fewer sailors were privileged to gaze at that first panorama of the Pacific Ocean. Those who remained crossed the meridian now known as the International Date Line in the early spring of 1521 after 98 days on the Pacific Ocean. During those long days at sea, many of Magellan's men died of starvation and disease. Later, Magellan became involved in an insular conflict in the Philippines and was killed in a tribal battle. Only one ship and 17 sailors under the command of the Basque navigator Elcano survived to complete the westward journey to Spain and thus prove once and for all that the world is round, with no precipice at the edge.

Sea weed cultivation is an alternative vocation for the coastal folk mainly the fisherfolk. There are times when fishing does not bring in enough returns and at such times seaweed cultivation becomes a profitable business. Sea weed culture involves the cultivation of green, brown and red seaweeds for food, fodder and production of phyco-colloids like Agar-agar, alginate and carrageenan. In recent times Phyco-colloids commercially important as these are a source of vegetarian jellies in the place of gelatine that has been banned. Alginate is used as a base material for ointments in cosmetic industry and as a thickener for ice creams. Three major groups of algae are used for culture namely the green algae, the brown algae and the red algae. Among green sea weeds Ulva is the commonly cultivated species but for red and brown sea weeds several species are available for cultivation. The common red algae cultivated for Agar-agar is Gracilaria while for Carrageenan, the best suited one is Chondrus crispus. In the case of brown algae, Laminaria, Fucus and Ascophyllum are cultivated on a large scale. There are several methods of cultivating sea weeds like Line farming, net farming, raft cultivation and pond culture.

The traditional economy. This is the type of economy in which the organization of production and distribution is frequently governed by tribal rules or customs. This type existed mostly in the early stages of development where the economy is strongly inked to the social structure of the community and people perform economic tasks for non- economic reasons. In the traditional economy, economic matters are largely determined by social or religious customs and traditions. For example, women may plough fields because that is their customary role and not because they are good at doing so. Traditional economic systems are often found in less developed countries, where they may be a hindrance to economic progress.

The command economy. In the command economy, an authoritarian central government calls the tune. It operates on instruction from those in power. In this type of economy, decisions in connection with the functions of an economic system are taken on a collective or group basis. There is collective ownership of factors of production. The group that owns the factors of production and takes decisions may be some government body. A command economy is a centrally planned economy. There is typically very little freedom of choice. The occupation of workers, the quantities of which type of commodity to be produced, and the distribution of income are determined by the central planners plus making arrangements for future economic growth. Cuba, North Korea, Russia, and Iran are examples of economies that are closest to perfect command economies.

Pure capitalism. Pure capitalism is an economic system based on private ownership and the freedom of individuals to conduct their economic affairs without interference from government bodies or other groups. Capitalist economic systems are characterized by a great deal of freedom of choice exercised by consumers and business firms in the market for commodities and resources. The capitalist economy is also known as the free exchange economy or market economy. The essence of pure capitalism is freedom. There is freedom to own property, freedom to buy and sell, and freedom from government interference in the economic aspect of each individual's life. Capitalism is best characterized by the economy of the United States, even though it is not a purely capitalist economy.

Mixed economy. Many economies are best described as mixtures of capitalistic and command systems. The United States and other countries where markets are heavily relied on to allocate resources and distribute output are known as mixed capitalistic systems. The characteristics of free enterprise system are manifested in most of its economic activities. However, some of its economic decisions of the mixed economy are taken on collective basis and some of the productive resources or goods are owned by a governmental body. In the mixed capitalistic economic system, both government and private decisions are important.

Questions

- (a) Traditional economy is an ancient practice. How did it operate?

What needs to be set right is our approach to work. It is a common sight in our country of employees reporting for duty on time and at the same time doing little work. If an assessment is made of time they spent in gossiping, drinking tea, eating “pan” and smoking cigarettes, it will be shocking to know that the time devoted to actual work is negligible. The problem is the standard which the leadership in administration sets for the staff. Forgot the ministers because they mix politics and administration. What do top bureaucrats do? What do the below down officials do? The administration set up remains week mainly because the employees do not have the right example to follow and they are more concerned about being in the good books of the bosses than doing work.

 - (iv) is more or less ineffective
- (c) The word 'assessment' means
 - (i) enquiry
 - (ii) report
 - (iii) evaluation
 - (iv) summary
- (d) The leadership in administration
 - (i) sets a fine example to the employees
 - (ii) is of a reasonably high standard
 - (iii) is composed of idealists
 - (iv) is of a very poor standard

- (e) The central idea of passage could be best expressed by the following
 - (i) The employee outlook towards work is justified
